Well Known Men to be in the Fight for State Senate

MUCH POLITICAL GAB

Live Wires to Get Into Scrap
--Things Lining up For May Primaries

With three possible Republican candidates for state senator for the Washington-Greene district already in prospect, a merry fight is indicated at the primaries next May. The candidates already mentioned are former assemblyman Charles A. Bentley of Monongahela County, Coroner James T. Heffran of Speers and F. O. Mitchell, Esq., of Washington. As a matter of course there may be others, as under the present primary law any Republican can be a candidate, regardless of status or political frameups.

The three prospective candidates mentioned, however, reveal an interesting situation in the forthcoming campaign, and may serve as an indication as to the plan of battle. As Charles Bentley was the first to be mentioned, and on account of his former political affiliations, it is easy to infer that he is the choice of the Republican organization at the county seat. That he will be a formidable candidate against any who may oppose him for the nomination must be recognized, as in his campaigns for assemblyman few candidates ever developed better vote getting qualities than he. His wide acquaintance and immense popularity with the voters are elements which will give him a big advance in the campaign for the nomination.

On the other hand James T. Heffran, who is rounding out his second term as county coroner, is a popular official with a wide acquaintance over the county and district. He will be put forward as the candidate of the United Mine Workers and labor organizations, it is said, and with this support is expected to have a big advantage in the campaign for the nomination. In this, however, he would not have a clear field as a labor candidate, as Bentley, who is affiliated with the railway conductors organization, is also in a position to bid for the organized labor vote.

Over at Washington those opposed to the Republican organization leaders are bringing out F. O. Mitchell, Esq., it is said, as a candidate. Mitchell is a young lawyer, who, it is said, would represent the independent element of the party, and stand for a type of progressiveness not endorsed by the present party leaders. Should he be a candidate he would undoubtedly inject some elements into the campaign which the old-time leaders are very desirous of keeping under cover at the present time.

Thus far none of the prospective candidates or their friends have declared themselves on a number of issues which are likely to be live wires in the campaign, and which may be determining factors in landing the nomination. Local option and club licenses, woman suffrage, child labor, and a workman's compensation law are some of the issues which will enter into the campaign.

and indications are that the voters will demand of the various candidates their attitude and standing on each and every one of these questions. One element to be reckoned within this campaign is the Grange organization, which is well organized in the county and alive to the issues that affect the welfare of the farmer and the people in general. The state Grange has declared in favor of club licenses, and any candidate that gets the grangers' support in the county will undoubtedly have to declare himself on this subject.

Organized labor will make a hot night for candidates favorable to the child labor and compensation laws, and the temperance people will also put forward the fight of their lives to secure a senator favorable to local option and other prohibitory measures. The candidate who can command the farmers, the labor and the temperance vote unitedly, will undoubtedly have the best chance to land the Republican nomination.

Senator J. Carter Judson, will no doubt be a candidate again for the Democratic nomination, with very good prospects of an endorsement by the Washington party. His fight, however, would be at the general election, should he again be his party's candidate. As his past record on temperance and labor questions was favorable, he would be a formidable candidate at the election, no matter who may succeed in landing the Republican nomination.

In regard to candidates for assembly it is announced that former assemblyman William Feeney of Charleroi will again be a candidate for the Republican nomination. Mr. Feeney served one term in the assembly, where he was active in the interests of labor legislation. He received the Republican nomination for a second term but was defeated at the general election in the Bull Moose tidal wave that swept the state. It is also rumored that Ralph W. Allison of Washington and James H. Walker of East Pike Run, who were defeated with Mr. Feeney, may again be candidates.

CALIFORNIA MAN KILLED; STEPS IN PATH OF A TRAIN

Tony Gugliuzo, a Slav, was killed on the railroad near the office of the Vesta No. 4 coal mine Monday night. He was at work handling posts and stepped from in front of one train on the railroad track in front of another. His body was much mangled. It was taken to the Guiser morgue. His widow and five children survive. His oldest son is now on the ocean on his way to this country after a visit abroad.

GIRL DISAPPEARS VERY MYSTERIOUSLY

Belle Vernon 17-Year Old Lass Strangely Missing From Home--Last Seen on Last Friday Morning

Either slipped away or having disappeared of her own accord, pretty Bertha Andrews, the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews, a well known family of Belle Vernon, is missing. She has been gone since last Friday. The last heard of her when she left the Fifth Avenue hotel in Monessen on last Friday morning. Alarmed, her parents today notified the police.

The girl is well educated and qualified to do stenographic work. Last Thursday, she went to the Flinn Avenue hotel in Monessen, applied for a position as dining room girl, and was given the place. She did not leave her name. On Friday morning she left the hotel and failed to return. Her parents thought little of remaining away a day or two without writing or telephoning, thinking she was being cared for at the hotel, but when there was no news to be learned from her today, they started a search.

It was thought possible that she had come to Charleroi to look for a position as stenographer, but telephone messages to offices here disclosed no information concerning her whereabouts.

Bertha is a girl of an attractive type, and a brunette. She was well attired when she left home in a dark suit.

GETTING MOTHERS' PENSION MONEY LIKE GETTING PIPE ORGAN FUNDS

State Will Give One Half if County Will Give the Other Half--One City Gives Washington County Decided Benefit

The sum of $1,800 in state money is available to Washington county for mothers' pensions under the new law now effective for providing for the care of mothers, providing the county will subscribe a similar amount. If the county commissioners favorably receive the proposal of the committee to visit them shortly in the interests of widowed or abandoned mothers, and appropriate the amount set, there will be immediately available the sum of $3,600. This is all owing to the fact that a third class city--Monongahela--is in the limits of Washington county.

By the new law the state grades its appropriations according to population. The law says that $3,000 is available annually from the state for counties having cities of the first class, $2,000 for counties having cities of the second class, $1,800 for counties having cities of the third class and $1,200 for counties not included in the first three enumerated classes.

This law places Washington county in what might be termed the third class because of Monongahela's third-class charter. Under the provisions of the mothers' pension law a board to consist of from five to seven persons, women, is appointed by the governor for counties where the mothers' pension law is desired to be made effective. All this depends upon the action of the watchdogs of the county treasury, who finally have the say.

Getting mothers' pension money for a county is like getting Carnegie's aid to buy a pipe organ for a church. The state says it had a certain amount of money, but the county must put up an equal sum to secure it. The money must be used entirely for expenses. The board's salary consists in the knowledge of duty well done, but they are permitted to hire an investigator and if necessary a stenographer. They must have headquarters, properly furnished and must pay for the stationery and postage.

BRAKEMAN IS CRUSHED TO DEATH BY HIS OWN TRAIN

Slipping on an icy rail Charles Siesegang a brakeman on the P. & E. railroad was crushed to death under his train at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon opposite Monongahela. The accident occurred at the Gallatin mine where a coal train was being loaded.

The dead man was 24 years of age and married. He lived at Glassport. The body was taken to McKeesport and later removed to the dead man's home.

HENRY TRENT

WILL HAVE TO FACE THE JURY

Murder Charge to Rest Against Monongahela Man for Killing Coulter

CORONER INVESTIGATES

Henry Trent, colored, must answer to the next grand jury for the killing here early Sunday morning of John Coulter, a well known young white man of Monongahela, who was shot down in the street near an alleged speakeasy following a quarrel over a woman who was with Trent. Monday at a hearing before Mayor Isler, Trent was held for court on a charge of murder. Monday afternoon the jury empaneled by Coroner James Heffran recommended that Trent be held to await grand jury action on a charge of murder. The accused man was taken to the county jail today.

The same witnesses were heard at both hearings and their stories did not vary. Among those placed on the stand were Alfred Hodgson, Det. Varia, John Beal, Robert Turner and Annie Holmes, the latter being the woman who was with Trent when the shooting occurred.

The evidence brought out that during the night Trent had been at the Beal house and had had in his possession a revolver which has not been recovered. Words over the woman who accompanied Trent led to the shooting according to the witnesses, but details of the quarrel were lacking.

While it was not brought out at either hearing it is said that on Sunday Trent told the superintendent of the Monongahela mine where he worked that Coulter had beaten him on Saturday night and had threatened him Trent is alleged to have said he was prepared for Coulter when they met Sunday morning. At the hearing before the mayor Trent declared he was not guilty and added that he had fired in self defense.

Funeral services over the body of John Coulter were held at the home of his uncle, John P. N. Coulter of Cemetery street Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The services were presided over by Rev. J. C. Macey.

FIRE RESULTS IN DESTRUCTION OF A DWELLING

The dwelling at Donora occupied by D. G. Finnegan, superintendent of the Donora blast furnaces, was destroyed this morning by fire that is thought to have originated from a furnace fire. Mr. Finnegan was in Pittsburgh at the time. Mrs. Finnegan and her children managed to escape. The dwelling was owned by the American Steel and Wire company. The loss it is stated will be about $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

THE HIGH COST OF DOGS

Once again is the high cost of dogs which is incidentally a big item in the high cost of living, demonstrated in Washington county. Last week the authorities paid out $4,914.
22 for sheep or cattle killed or maintained by dogs. This money, which is paid out of taxes collected on dogs, is disbursed when paid in, but to the claimants first on the waiting list.
The dog tax in the county, however, is not nearly sufficient to cover the claims for sheep killed or maintained by dogs, and there is consequently a long waiting list.

Multiplying the damage done by dogs in Washington county proportionately by 67, the number of counties in the state, and one has some idea of the economic losses inflicted on society through the medium of dogs.
But these direct losses are not all.
The dog menace has so discouraged the raising of sheep in the state that the industry is scarcely worth considering any more. As a result wool and mutton are both scarce and dear.
Thousands of acres of wild land which would afford the best kind of sheep ranges are unutilized. Lamb chops and mutton and wool garments are now the luxuries of the rich, and all because society was so much solicitude for the personal liberty of the yellow dog.

It seems incredible that when so much human effort is being put forth and so much money expended to ameliorate the conditions that increase the cost of living that no attention has been paid to the high cost of dogs. Expensive lobbies are maintained in congress and the legislature to combat some institution, that may effect prices of commodities indirectly, but no attention is paid to the dog question which operates directly against society in dollars and cents. The legislator who introduces and effects the passage of a law in the state compelling dogs to be leashed or chained to a post will confer a greater benefit on the people than a ten per cent increase in wages would to every worker in the state.

MOTHERS' PENSIONS

The action of the women's socities at Washington who have taken steps to avail themselves of the benefits of the mothers' pension law passed by congress, is a commendable one.

ed by the recent legislature should command the hearty support of all charitable workers. This money is designed to afford aid to mothers who are widowed, indigent or abandoned. Washington county is a small part of the appropriation made for the purpose and it is proposed to take full advantage of the aid thus afforded if the county officials will co-operate as required by the act.

Under the provisions of the act Washington county, by reason of Monongahela being a third class city is entitled to $15,000 from the appropriation of $200,000 appropriated for the whole state provided the county commissioners will appropriate a like sum from the funds of the county for the same purpose. This money is disbursed by a commission of seven women appointed in each county for that purpose by the governor. The women interested in the movement in Washington have appointed a committee to wait on the county commissioners in the regard to the matter, and it is now up to those officials to grant or refuse the request. It is to be hoped that they will see their way clear to grant the appropriation, as this method of public charity is one of the most beneficent and uplifting of any that has been devised.

ELECTRIC SPARKS

When a man gets cut open to have his stomach examined or stock taken of his liver they call it a capital operation because it is capital punishment. But no living name has been provided yet for the subsequent operation on a man's pocketbook.

If Henry Ford's idea in profit sharing was to advertise for additional male help, he should not complain.

It not only looks as if President Wilson had broken precedent, but hoodgdo.

When a man tries to face a 50 mile north wind, he feels as though he had been in swimming on a chilly day and come out with an ear full of water.

People who think the Panama Canal locks are so wonderful have never seen Lock No. 5 in the Monongahela river.

It is interesting to note that Florida is not known as a thriving summer resort.

The express companies announce that they are going to outdo the parcel post. Wonder if they didn't put up their hands too late.

A man never feels his approaching years so much as at the time for his annual payment of his life insurance premium.

ceive, says the Bible, and this may be the excuse some fellows have for cussing their neighbor for keeping chickens.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

At a school meeting in one of the nearby counties recently the school ma'ams were swapping stories and relating the humorous and unique incidents that they ran up against in their experiences. One of the teachers of a grade or two removed from the primary told of how she one time had a class write something about cats. One of the lads in her class submitted the following unique production:

"Cats have their backbones edge-ways. Ours are lengthways. Cats hump and spit when mad."

A woman visitor from one of the suburbs of Pittsburgh tells an amusing story of neighborhood curiosity that is always manifested in small or exclusive communities over the arrival of new residents. In her locality a strange family not long ago moved into a handsome new house that had just been completed. All the women of the neighborhood were curious to learn something about the new comers, and the grocer's deliveryman, the laundryman and the garbage man were interviewed in turn for details concerning the new arrivals. One inquisitive dame in particular nailed the garbage man as he came around.

"What do you learn about that new family?" she inquired. "Who are they? and where did they come from?

NAUGHTY WIGGLES NO MORE; LA NETA ACCEPTS FLOWERS

Connellsville Visited by "Girl in Red" Who Does Not Act Wickedly

MAYOR SAYS MUSTN'T

Since Connellsville has arrived at the dignity of a city of the third class, with a mayor instead of a burgess, the former official has evidently reached the conclusion that the line governing public morals must be drawn somewhat finer than it was wont to be in the coke metropolis. It used to be that Connellsville had a reputation that was immensely popular with the "May Fisk Blondes" and the "Red Stocking Minstrels" burlesque circuit which traverses the coke regions but that reputation is now a thing of the past.

This change of heart all came about with the booking of the "High Rollers" burlesque company at Connellsville for Friday night of last week. From the appearance of the billboards the new mayor opined that something might be doing that would not be altogether decorous in a new city of the third class. So he scanned the announcements of leading attractions. Sure enough—the mayor had once been a younger man than he is now—there was La Neta, the "Girl in Red," scheduled to cap the climax with a dance which Mary Garden has dignified with a Biblical name.

Calling his chief of police on the night of the show the new mayor of Connellsville instructed that official to see to it that La Neta did not execute any dances with "little movements that had a meaning all their own." The chief delivered his ultimatum to the management of the house, and was asked if La Neta couldn't appear as the "Girl in Red," advance decorously to the footlights and receive a bouquet which an admirer was to present to her.

"She can," assented the chief.
"only she mustn't let her artistic temperament get too strong for her to resist."

He was assured that La Neta would be very circumspect, and not conduct herself in keeping with her costume. The chief dropped in to see that his order was executed—as well as the show—and all went well until La Neta appeared.

When she tripped down to the footlights with a movement that might have prompted any one to have asked her if she ever worked in a watch factory, the chief jumped to his feet and rushed down the aisle. La Neta, however, was too quick for him. She reached the footlights, grasped the extended bouquet, bowed behind the scenes, and the show was over.

The crowd didn't know that the lid had been put on and a big lot of disgusted men and youths were loud in their assertions that the old coke-town borough regulations—or rather the absence of them—were preferable to new fangled city ways.

MANY ATTAIN LAURELS YOUNG

Long List of Those Men Who Have Achieved Fame Before the Age of Thirty.

In his dignified tribute to Perry, former President Taft called attention to the fact that he hero of Lake Erie was only twenty-eight when he won that glorious victory. An interesting roll might be called of the men who achieved deathless fame while yet in their twenties, says the St. Louis Republic, editorially. First of all, we suppose would be Alexander, who had vanquished the world, and for whom Fate dashed the doleful sign "nothing doing" ere yet he was hardly thirty.
The hang of his toga was still a matter of vast concern to the foppish Caesar when he was pushing his triremes across the channel to the chalk cliffs of Brittany. At twenty-eight the youth of Napoleon was far behind and kings had learned to come down and personally open the door when he knocked. Burns was singing his last songs at twenty-eight and Byron awoke to acclaim while still younger. The dead boy in a garret, eighteen or thereabouts, was Charterton. Emmett named the terms on which his epitaph might be written "in the brave days when he was twenty-one."

Slamming the door on history and sauntering out into the golden light of the living day, it is a pleasure to reflect that at twenty-eight John D. Rockefeller was about as poor and honest as the rest of us, and at twenty-eight the wreathed skyline of Pittsburgh no prophet could discern the roof of a Carnegie library. But those are negative views. By way of citing the positive, we observe that Tyrus Cobb had put a flashing spike on the home plate of immortality while still under twenty-eight.

But of arms and the men, and letters and pelf and politics, enough! As a matter of fact and justice be it declared that the name of women who attain their greatest beauty without ever admitting twenty-eight is legion —and will continue to be.

SPOILED EFFECT OF STORY

Listener's Unkind Remark After Sailor Had Told of Terrors of the Waterspout.

Coroner James J. Phelan of Bridgeport, whose investigation of the Stamford wreck has given him a nationwide reputation for courage and as-ertness, said to a reporter, apropos of a legal tangle:

"These lawyers tried hard to confuse the issue, and, if they had succeeded, they'd have put all hands in the ludicrous position of Swallow Mc-Bride."

"Swallow McBride, you know, sat listening gizzically at the lodge, to a sailor who had just returned to Cincinnatus from a world tour."

"And did you see any waterspouts?" the voyager was asked.

"Waterspouts? Sure!"

"And he described a waterspout with all its horrors that had nearly done for his ship and him in the Indian ocean."

"At this point Swallow interposed."

"Holy smoke," he said, "you make me tired. All this talk about a waterspout! Why, what the dickens is there in a waterspout to be afraid of?"

"You'd know soon enough," said the sailor loftily "if you ran across one."

"Ran across one?" said Swallow.

"Why, there's three in our back yard, one at each corner of the wall, and they don't frighten me no more than a baby."

Crickets as Thermometers.

It is not generally known that the August crickets are a natural thermometer. By carefully counting the number of vibrations to a minute one can tell accurately what the temperature is. The hotter the evening the more rapidly they play their sharp little instruments and, as the days shorten and the nights become cooler, their waves of sound have greater distances between them until when a frost is threatened only now and then one more enterprising than the rest keeps up a forlorn hope of sound.

Why they are moved to join nature's great orchestra is a problem no one can answer. It would seem to be hard work to rub their wings together so assiduously: it must be wearing on the corrugated little veins. Probably they can't help it: "It is their nature to."

They are children of the darkness; nothing is heard of them in the daytime, but they make up for their silence by their obstreperous tumult when the mercury climbs into the sixties.

The Reason.

An Englishman visiting this country was remarking upon several things which had somewhat surprised him while in New York.

"Most remarkable!" he said. "Your aged New York women are so straight and upstanding! I have not seen even a bent-over old woman."

"Easily explained," returned his American friend. "When women become too old to be offered seats in the subway and surface cars they get straightened out hanging on to the straps."

The Tactless One.

"I will confess to you," she said, "that I am older than I look. I will be thirty-one on my next birthday."

"Really," he replied. "Hardly anyone would guess that you were more

HUMPHRIES SIGNS WITH WINDY CITY

When the roll of the Chicago Cubs is called on February 18 to go to Tampa, Fla., for the training, season, Bert Humphries of California, pitcher will be right there to answer to his name. He said that himself this morning, Monday Bert went to Pittsburg to meet Manager Johnny Evers of the Cubs; who alarmed at the reports that Bert had been approached unduly by Federal league agents had hastened to Pennsylvania.
It did not require Humphries long to affix his name to a Chicago contract.

Humphries has been nursing his strength this winter and keeping in trim for the coming season. It is generally expected that he will be the leading pitcher of the Cub team this year. His fine record of last season having given rise to that thought.
Humphries declined to talk over the telephone this morning, but his wife talked for him and admission was made that his contract runs for three years at a good salary. What the contract price is, he declines to say.

THE POOREST OF ALL PEOPLE

Natives of the Arctic Who Have Enough to Eat Are Considered Very Fortunate.

I have not known so poor a winter during the whole of my stay among the Eskimos (now 22 years), says a writer in the Christian Herald. While the coast is ice-bound, the days short, snowstorms frequent and the thermometer often 40 degrees below zero, it is not possible for the Eskimo to do much to secure a living. One way for the women to produce something was to cut holes through the sea ice, which reaches a thickness of six feet, and there they stood fishing for rock cod, most days securing only between five and ten fish. The mission endeavored to help, but poverty was so general that all resources were taxed to the utmost.

An outsider has no idea of what poverty among the Eskimos means. At the best of times the wants of an Eskimo are few and his food consists of the coarsest of substances. Seal walrus and whale meat form a large part of their diet, and the blubber of these animals serves in the place of pork or butter.

In China the famished inhabitants subsisted on roots or some inferior vegetation, but here the vegetable kingdom has nothing to offer. The earth is frozen and deeply covered with snow and ice; the birds have gone south and one might walk for miles without seeing a living creature. At the same time it is of interest to know even these primitive people have for ages found a kind of substitute for food somewhere. Along the beach, which is known to have plenty of seaweed, noles are cut through the thick ice and the seaweed and mussels pulled up through the holes, and it is on record that the Eskimos have sustained life on this, one might say, refuse of the sea, during the long winter months.

The Eskimo has no word for "God" in his language, and it has been fully marked that the very austere aspect of life may have helped to exclude the conception of a superhuman, benevolent Being from the beliefs and superstitions of these people of the Arctic.

THOSE WHO DO NOT THINK

Eskimos Believe It is Not Necessary If They Have Enough Meat to Eat.

Where the physical struggle for life is at its keenest, as it is among the Eskimos, the years glide by free from the more subtle cares and worries of the civilized man. The Eskimo, says Mr. Knud Rasmussen in "The People of the Polar North," does not count the days, and keeps no record of time. All his thoughts are centered on hunting.

Once I asked an Eskimo who seemed to be plunged in reflection, "What are you thinking about?"

He laughed at my question, and said: "Oh, it is only you white men who go so much for thinking. Up here we only think of our food, and whether we have enough for the long dark of the winter. If we have meat enough then there is no need to think. I have meat and to spare!"

I saw that I had insulted him by crediting him with thought.

On another occasion I asked an unusually intelligent Eskimo, Panigpak, who had taken part in Peary's last north polar expedition:

"Tell me, what did you suppose was the object of all your exertions? What did you think when you saw the land disappear behind you, and you found yourself out on the drifting ice-floes?"

"Think?" said Panigpak, astonished. "I did not need to think. Peary did that."

Eating becomes the great thing with the Eskimos. I once excused myself, when paying a visit, with the plea that I had already eaten and had had enough. I was laughed at, and the answer I received was:

"There thou talkest like a dog! Dogs can be stuffed till they are satisfied and can eat no more; but people—people can always eat!"

Art and Engineering.

The close connection of the artistic and the mechanical instinct is shown again in recent developments in France.

France is doubtless the most eminent modern nation in the world of art. But in the past 20 years she has come to be one of the foremost in mechanical engineering; as the development of the automobile and the aeroplane bears witness. Coincidentally, there has been at least a relative falling off in her standing in art.

This looks as if the demand of modern times had turned machine-makers the genius which in an earlier day would have expressed itself with brush and chisel.

The artist and the engineer or inventor have the same faculty of seeing a thing before it is finished, the same keen sense of proportion and relation, the same intense desire to put ideas into concrete form.

When America pauses from her rush in mechanical invention, she will develop an artistic power that will astonish the world.

Historic British Ship.

One of the most interesting ships afloat is the Eagle, which lies in one of the docks of the River Mersey, England. For more than fifty years the Eagle has served as a training ship. It was launched in 1804, and took part in several important engagements in the early part of the last century, when the Napoleonic power was at its height.
